Kapitel 1: Uzumaki Naruto

"Naruto!! Come back here, you damn pest!"

A blonde head ran down the street, the appropriate face for it grinned, laughed loudly.

"See ya next time, old man!" he stated and shoved a piece of bread into his mouth. As he arrived in an alley, far away from the market's stalls and noises he squatted down and began chewing the bread cheerfully. He looked forward, chuckled lightly and kicked a can against the wall across him, the crows and pigeons that assembled in front of him flew away in a huddled mess of feathers and the nervous strokes of wings.

"Seriously, you guys... Go and get your own. We have a deal, right? You don't take mine, I don't take yours." he murmured as the birds came back, their dark eyes staring at the bread in the hands of the young boy both sadly and longingly. The boy sighed.

"I can't believe you..."

He took another bite, then threw the rest of the bread to the ground. The mass of feathers fell over the left-over. The blonde smiled at them as a few of the crows landed on his shoulders and head, watching the other birds fight for their share of bread.

"Naruto!"

A brown-haired boy stood in the street entrance, his eyes darting around as if he'd search for someone. The blonde covered his eyes from the sun with one hand that shone too brightly.

"Kiba. What's up?" He grinned and stood up from the ground, the birds on his shoulders and his head flew away.

"Dude, the police is searchin' for you! Seems like that old man reported ya!"

The brown-haired kid looked at the blonde worried. The slits of his eyes opened widely now and Naruto knew they only did when something serious happened. Naruto grinned and crosses his arms behind his head.

"Fine, fine... But hey! I saw this new shop today, man, the stuff there is amazing! Only high quality stuff! Let's go and check it out!"

Kiba grunted. "Didn't you hear what I just said?"

"I heard you perfectly fine. I'm not deaf." Naruto sighed.

"Come on, I need new clothes! Look at me, I look like a homeless!"

Kiba chuckled lightly now. "That's because we are homeless, idiot." He murmured, the blonde chuckled as well. "Then you agree, right? Let's go."
